MEMORANDA.

The following particulars of the ancient Church at Titsey are extracted from a Manuscript in the British Museum, entitled Add. MS. 6223, ff. 31A—36A, which was brought to the Editor's notice by Arthur F. G. Leveson Gower, Esq., F.S.A.:—

COLLECTIONS FOR TITSEY IN COM. SURREY 1731.

By Mr. Edward Steele.*

The Church is small, yett Consists of three Isles and two Chancels,† in that of the South Side‡ is a Neat Right Wainscott Alter Piece, of the Dorich Order, with two Pillasters, suporting a Pitcht Pediment, wherein is the Holy Characters in Hebrew within a Triangular Glory encompast with Cherubins Heads Handsomly Painted in their Proper Colours, The Commandments is well writ with Gold on two black Tables, also the Lords Prayer and Creed on Tables of Blew. Beneath the Commandments over the Communion Table is writ,

Do This in Remembrance of me.

The Windows of the Whole Church, seems to have been Curiously Adorn'd with Painted Glass. 'Tho at Present very much defaced, and only some Fragments left that shews their former Splendour.

The East Window of this Chancel (1),‖ has the Remains of a Large Figure its Drapery is Blew, with a Book in its Hand, round the Whole Light is a Border of Black rampant Lions on a Field of Gold.

In the North Window (2) is a Shield bearing Or a Cross engraild Sable, and in a Window on y^e^ South Side (3), is a Shield Argent, Chargde with a Cross Geules, round the Whole Window is a Verge of Red, interchangeably set with Flower de luces Or, and Castles triple Towred Argent, in the other South Window, is also an Ancient Shield bearing Argent, a Cross double Pommetty G.

At the East end of this Wall is erected a small neat Monument (4) of White Itallion Marble, being a Compartment encompast with Drapery, on the Top is a flaming Urne, and at the bottom a Shield but without Arms.

Beneath the Said Monument (5), on a black Marble Table is writ with Characters of Gold;

[Here follows the Inscription to John Holbrook, Rector, who was buried 7 Aug. 1691.—Ed.]

On the Floore of the Chancel (6), as you enter the Body of the Church lies a large decayed Stone whereon was an Inscription engraved on Brass, now Missing.

The Nave of the Church is seperated from each side Isle, by two spatious Arches (7), also by a large Arch from the Chancel (8), near which on the South Side, Stands the Pulpet (9), well performd of right Wainscot, y^e^ underpart of its Tipe, is fineerd, or Inlaid with, the following Characters, viz.—

surrounded with Streems of Glory.

The Font (10), is as you enter the Church from the South Doore.

There is now to be seen neither Arms or Inscription in any of the three Iles except in the East Window of the South, is an Ancient Shield Gules, chargd with a salter Verey.

Also the Remains of a Shield bearing Azure, a Fess dancetty Ermins betwteen six Griffons heads erast Or. The Coat Armor of Ipswell.

At the East End of the North Isle, is built a Chapel or Chancel, Appropriated as I sopose to the sole use of the Greshams, for the Burials of that Ancient Family, at this Time much out of Repaire, in the Window of the North Side (11) remains the Pourtrat of St. George, on Foot, Armed Cap-a-Pee, on his left Arme is a large Shield of Silver, bearing a Cross of Gules, with the same on his Brest plate, and in his right Hand a spear, with a Banner of the like Armes, this with the Shield of St. George in the Chancel, before mentioned perswades me that the Church is dedicated to that Martial Saint. There is also in this Window the Figure of a Bishop, but of home I know not.

The East Window (12) has also Painted Glass, but nothing material, except that in the upper Light, is the Almighty, as an Old-Man sitting on a Throne, Exposeing before him our Saviour Crucified on the Cross, below them, in two other Paines, sitts on the right hand the Holy Virgin, and on the left, Jesus.

At the East End of the North Side, stands an Ancient Monument of Sussex Marble, being an Alter Tombe (13), Inright with Gothick Orniments, also (14) against the Wall under a Cannopie the Pourtraits of A Gentleman and his Lady, before two fald-stools supporting books, behind him four Sons and behind her three Daughters, all in Devout Kneeling Postures, engraved on Brass, likewise four Shields of Armes, the first of Gresham, with its Crest and Mantling as here-after describde, The second Shield bears the Arms of Gresham, quartered with that of Ipswell, as before mentioned, with the Crest of Gresham. The third are the same but without the Crests, there are several other shields, but they all bear the Same Armes as before, beneath the figures was a brass plate now in Possession of Sir Marmaduke Gresham, which shews that,

The Date 1579 is set by a Modern hand, but the Pedigre of this Family saith Mr. Gresham dyed on the 21 of June 1578. Against the Same Wall, at the West End (15), is erected a large Noble Monument of Allablaster, richly Gilded and the Inscription is writt on a black Marble Table with Letters of Gold, denoting that

[Here follows the Inscription to S^{r} John Gresham, who was buried 29 May 1643.—Ed.]

This Monument was erected in the year of our Lord 1660. On the Top of the Monument, over a double Pitched Pediment, stands a large shield bearing the Arms of Gresham viz.: Argent, A Cheveron Ermins between three Mullets Sable pierced of the Field. The Crest on a Helmett befitting his Dignity, a Grass-hoper Proper, Mantled Gules, doubled Argent But the Crest in the Pedygree is Gold on a Mount Proper, which I take to be the true Crest, unless some of the same Family might alter the Colour of the Crest, to distinguish their Houses, for I find amongst the ancient painted Glass, several Crests both Gold, and Green.

In the lower parte, or Base of the Monument is a Swelling Table of Black Marble Inscribde with Gold, viz.

[Here follows the Inscription to Dame Elizabeth Gresham, who was buried 10 June 1664.—Ed.]

Beneath is three Shields bearing Arms, The first has the Arms of Gresham, the last is Argent, on a Bend Cottized Gules, 3 Plates* The Middle Shield has these two Coates Impaled.

Besides these Monuments, in this Chapel are two Hatchments, one Hanging over the Monument of William Gresham, to the Memory of Sr Edward Gresham, Baronet, bearing the Arms & Crest of the Family with ye Arms of Ulster Impaling A, 3 Sinister Hands Couppe at the Wrists, Gules, by the Name of Maynard, he having married the Daughter of Sr. John Maynard, Knight, the Kings Serjeant at Law.

The other Hatchment is over the Arch that devides this Chapel from the North Isle and bears Gresham, Tyrony Impaled with Or a Raven Proper, by the name of Corbet, and was the Atchivement of Alice, Lady of Sr. Marmaduke Gresham, and Daughter of Richard Corbet, Lord Bishop of Norwich. She died 1682.

At ye West End of the Church within a Stone Tower, beneath a Wooden Spire, hangs only two small Modern Bells, on the largest of which, is 1640.

This is all that is worth Taken Notice off in this Church, and I Will only add a very Ancient Inscription cut on a Stone now lying at the outmost Door of the Kitchen of Sr. Marmaduke Greshams House tho I am Inform'd it formerly lay in another part of this Kitchen at that time a paved stone Court, and because there was writing on it yt few or none that had seen it Could read or make any thing off, they therefore took it up, and dug underneath and round about it to a great Depth in expectation of Treasures but to their great disapointtment they could discover nothing which makes me Conclude it Originally came from ye Church near adjoyning, The stone is wider at the head than feet, and on it is Cutt† a Cross Flowrey sett on three Gress or Steps, but the writing is at the Head, & contrary to the Cross.

* These should be Besants.—Ed.

Note by P. M. Johnston, F.S.A., on the Plan and View of the Mediæval Church.

The architectural data go to prove that the nave of the Church destroyed in 1775 was that of the pre-Conquest building, measuring about 33½ feet in length by 16½ feet in breadth, to which co-extensive aisles, from 7 to 8 feet wide, were added at some date within the twelfth century, the nave walls being pierced for the purpose, to form two arches of wide span on either side, each having a massive circular column, with, apparently, square responds.

At a somewhat later date, perhaps early in the thirteenth century, a square tower seems to have been built at the N.W. angle, taking in the end of the N. aisle. This either fell, or was pulled down, in the succeeding century, when its place was taken by the three-storied tower at the west end of the nave, shewn in Plate 2, with diagonal buttresses, and a timber broach spire, covered with oak shingles. This tower had a western doorway, and windows of pointed form in the several stories.

The N. chapel and chancel appear to have been rebuilt on much more spacious lines in the fourteenth century, and at the same time the three two-light traceried windows with square heads, shewn in the engraving, seem to have been inserted.

A fourteenth-century panel of glass with the figure of St. George, answering to the description in Mr. Steele's account of the Church, is preserved in the Chancel of Wimbledon Parish Church.

The following particulars as to the Parish of Titsey are extracted from a "Handbook to the Parish of Titsey," by Granville Leveson-Gower, Esq., F.S.A. (London: Wyman and Sons. 1869):—

AND THE OBJECTS OF INTEREST IN THE PARISH.

Titsey is a parish in the Hundred of Tandridge, Union of Godstone, 21 miles south of London. Extent, 1936 acres. Population in 1861, 167. Number of inhabited houses, 30.

The name first occurs in the will of Beorthric, a Saxon, A.D. 962. It is there written "Tydiceseg." In Domesday Book it is spelt "Ticesei," and subsequently Tycheseye, Tyttesey, and Titsey. The latter part of the word, "ea" or "ey," is the Saxon for "water"; the former is either the name of some early Saxon owner, "Tydic," or is derived from the legendary Saxon fairy, "Tit." The stream which gives the name its termination rises in the garden at Titsey Place, and is one of the sources of the Medway. There were formerly a number of cottages near the spring, a mill, and a malt-house.

Beorthric, and Ælfswyth his wife, A.D. 962, devised Tydiceseg, and the deeds belonging to it, to Wulfsige, on condition of his giving 1000 pence to the church of Rochester. At the time of Domesday Survey, A.D. 1086, Hamo de Valoines held the manor of Titsey of Richard de Tonbridge. In the time of King John and Henry III., we find the family of "de Tichesey" in possession of the estate; and from them, in the latter part of the reign of Edward I., it passed by marriage to the Uvedale family. It continued in their hands until 1535, when it was purchased by Sir John Gresham, Kt., Lord Mayor of London, from whom it descended to Sir John Gresham, Bart., who died in 1801, leaving an only daughter and heiress, married in 1804 to William Leveson Gower, Esq.

The Manor House.

There was a Manor House at Titsey as early as the year 1297. Upon the death of Thomas de Ticheseye in that year, it was found that he had a "capital messuage" worth, with the garden and other enclosures, 13s. 4d. Tradition says that one of the Uvedales "buildide a Manor House at Tideseye" in the time of Henry IV. The Greshams, after they purchased the manor, probably enlarged the house. William Gresham, Esq., in his will dated 1579 mentions the "Ceelings and Portalls of Waynscott" of his house at Titsey; and Sir Marmaduke Gresham, Bart. in 1697, speaks of the Gallery Chamber of his house at Titsey. Aubrey, writing cir. 1716, says, "Sir Charles Gresham, Bt., has a large fair old seat or Mansion House, near the Church." The principal part of the old house was pulled down by Sir John Gresham, Bart., between 1760 and 1770, a small portion on the north side alone being preserved, which is still standing, and is of the date of James I., or thereabouts. The present house was built by Sir John Gresham, Bart., but underwent considerable alterations in 1831-32. The dining-room wing was erected in 1856. Over the chimney-piece in the entrance-hall, enclosed in a frame, are four carved oak panels, bearing the Gresham motto, "Fiat Voluntas Tua," surmounted by four heads (engraved by Brayley in his "History of Surrey"), and in the sideboard in the dining-room is a shield bearing the arms of Gresham and Ipswell quarterly, with the initials W. G. (William Gresham) below, and above a squire's helmet, and crest a grasshopper. There is also a bedroom entirely fitted up with oak panelling, with a very handsome carved mantel-piece. These carvings are all of the Elizabethan period, and existed formerly in the old mansion.

The two following portraits in the dining-room deserve notice —those of Sir Thomas Gresham, the founder of the Royal Exchange, who died in 1579, painted by Sir Antonio More, and of William Gresham, Esq., his first-cousin, possessor of Titsey, who died in 1579, aged 58, painted by Cornelius Kettel. In the top corner, on the left side of the picture, is the painter's anagram, CK F (Cornelius Kettel fecit).

Among the curiosities is a silver-gilt "fede," or betrothal ring, found in the garden in 1738. It represents two hands joined, and has the following inscription in Gothic letters:—I.H.E. NAZAREN. M.F. (Jesus Nazarensis Mariæ filius). It is 15th century work.

A gold gimmel, or double ring, of the 16th century, known as Sir Thomas Gresham's wedding ring. It is richly enamelled, and set with a ruby and a crystal. When open it discovers two cavities, in one of which is the figure of an infant; round the inside of the hoop is enamelled the following:—"Quod Deus coniunsit homo non seperat" (What God hath joined together man doth not put asunder).

A brown stoneware jug of the middle of the 16th century, with handle broken, found at the bottom of a well near the house.

The Court Rolls of the Manor of Titsey commence in the year 1391, and an old rental of the manor, temp. John Uvedale, A.D. 1402, is still preserved.

The Rectory.

Titsey is a rectory in the deanery of Ewell. It was valued, 20 Edw. I., 1291, at 18 marks. In the king's books at £7 17s. 3½d. The tithe commutation rent-charge is £290 13s. 3d. Acres of glebe, 31. The old rectory house stood in what is now the garden, and the large elm-tree marks the boundary of the former glebe. The present rectory house, a short distance eastward of the church, was built by William Leveson Gower, Esq., in 1842. Rector since 1861, the Rev. Anthony Crowdy, M.A.* Patron, Granville Leveson Gower, Esq.† The earliest rector‡ whose name we know is John de Handlo, in 1283; but as he was a minor, the custody of the church was given to Solomon de Roffe. Gilbert Earl of Gloucester was patron in 1314. Patrons from 1316 to 1530, the Uvedale family; from 1530 to 1804 the Gresham family.

The Church.

Mention is made of a church in Domesday Survey; but besides this there have been three churches.

No. 1§ stood in what is now the garden at Titsey Place, not far from the large yew-tree, and close to the south side of the present house. It may have occupied the site of the early Saxon church, and some parts of it we know were as old as the time of Henry II. (1154—1189). The chapel, which was the burial-place of the Uvedales and afterwards of the Greshams, was dedicated to St. James. Sir Thomas de Uvedale, Kt., in 1367 left directions in his will that his wife, Benedicta, should finish it, and that his body should be buried there. Manning, in his "History of Surrey," thus describes this church:—"It is small, but has a nave and two aisles, as also two chancels. At the west end is a stone tower, with a wooden spire and two bells, on the largest of which is the date, 1640." The parish register says of it, "The old church was a noble structure, about 100 feet from E. to W., and 45 feet from N. to S., with a strong tower and lofty steeple." We learn from the same source that a church clock was set up in the year 1619, and that the church was new pewed, at the charge of the parish in 1713. In the windows of this church was a quantity of old stained glass, which all disappeared when the building was pulled down.

We find that a vestry was held in the parish church of Titsey on Sunday, the 18th of June, 1775, at which the Rev. John Bodicoate, the rector, reported "The parish church to be a very antient fabric, and by length of time become very ruinous, so as to be dangerous for the parishioners to assemble therein for divine worship." Whereupon it was unanimously resolved that the old parish church should be pulled down and a new church should be built. No time was lost in this wanton act. The register notes that "July 21, 1775, Began pul down the old church and removed, and the new one begun build."

No. 2.*—This church stood in the same situation as the present church. It is fitly described by Brayley ("Hist. of Surrey") as "a singularly mean-looking edifice of brick and stone, consisting merely of a single room, in which it must be regretted that more attention was not paid to respectability of appearance, as well as the comfort of the congregation." It was 45 feet 2 inches in length, 25 feet in width, 15 feet between floor and ceiling, and had five circular-headed windows with wooden sashes. It was consecrated on the 19th of July, 1776, by Dr. Thomas, bishop of Winchester. The estimate for pulling down the old church and building the new was £350.

No. 3,† the present church, was built from the design of J. L. Pearson, Esq., architect, Harley Street, London; builder, Mr. Carruthers, of Reigate. The first stone was laid on the 25th of February, 1860, and it was consecrated on the 27th of November, 1861, by Dr. Sumner, bishop of Winchester. It is a mixture of the Early English and Decorated styles. The outer walls are of Limpsfield sandstone, the window dressings of Bath stone; the interior is lined with the latter stone, with bands of green firestone from the Godstone quarries. The seats throughout the church are of oak. The reading-desk and pulpit were executed by Messrs. Rattee and Kett, of Cambridge; on the base of the latter is carved "Fiat Voluntas Tua" (Thy will be done), that being the motto of the Gresham family. The roof of the nave is of Baltic red deal. The marble shafts are of Devonshire marble, with the exception of the green, which are of Irish Galway marble. The reredos is of alabaster. The encaustic tiles are by Minton, and Bubb, those within the chancel being copied from some* found on the site of church No. 1. The three stained glass windows over the sedilia are by Clayton and Bell, and represent St. Peter, St. James, and St. John.

The dimensions of the church are as follows:—Length of nave 45 feet, width 20 feet 6 inches, height 38 feet 6 inches; length of chancel, 28 feet 9 inches, width 17 feet 8 inches, height 36 feet; square of tower 16 feet, height 42 feet; total height of tower and spire 95 feet.

There is one bell, with the following letters on it:—R. T. R R. J. T. J. P.; the initials probably of the churchwardens and overseers—date 1640, and letters B. E., probably the initials of Bryan Eldridge, a famous bellfounder of that time. This bell formerly hung in church No. 1.

In the mortuary chapel is a slab† of Sussex marble with brass of William Gresham, wife, four sons and three daughters—date 1579. The inscription, rendered into modern English, is the following:—"Near this place lieth William Gresham, son and heir unto Sir John Gresham, Kt., late sheriff of Surrey and Sussex, who took to wife one Beatrice Gybbon, by whom he had issue James, William, Thomas, and John, Mary, Elizabeth, and Sysselley. On whose soul Jesus have mercy.—1579." This slab formed part of an altar tomb which Aubrey describes as being against the south wall of the chancel in church No. 1.

On the south wall is a tablet‡ with the following inscription to Sir John Gresham, Kt., grandson of the abovenamed William Gresham:—"Near this place lyeth the Body of Sr John Gresham of this Parish of Titsey K^t^ whoe married Elizabeth eldest daughter of Sr. Tho^s^ Bishopp of Parham in the county of Sussex Kt &

The monument erected to the memory of William Leveson Gower, Esq., is of Caen stone, with alabaster slab and cross; it was designed by J. L. Pearson, Esq., the architect of the church, and executed by Messrs. Poole, of Westminster. The coats of arms, commencing from the south-west angle, represent successively the alliances of the Gresham family.

On the north wall, over the entrance-door, is a tablet of alabaster, with Galway marble columns, to the memory of Katherine Maria Leveson Gower and William Leveson Gower, Esq., her husband. It was designed by J. L. Pearson, Esq., and executed by Messrs. Poole, of Westminster.

In a vault under the chancel arch are buried—"Sir Marmaduke Gresham, Bart.; died 3 Jan., 1741, aged 41.

COMMUNION PLATE.

The chalice is of silver, small, but of good design, and elegantly chased: it has a cover with the date 1569. The flagon, also of silver, has this inscription: "Domina Alicia Gresham Eccl: de Titsey D. D. D. Jan. 14th 1678. Sanguinis una tui relevet me guttula Jesu." (Alicia Lady Gresham gave this as a gift to the church of Titsey, Jan. 14th, 1678. One drop of thy blood, O Jesus, shall raise me up.) Above are the arms of Gresham and Corbet quartered, Alice Gresham, the donor, being the daughter of Dr. Richard Corbet, Bishop of Norwich, and wife of Sir Marmaduke Gresham, Bart. The paten, which corresponds in design with the chalice, was the gift of the Rev. A. Crowdy, the rector, 1867.

The following is the inventory "of all maner vestymentes ornamentes plate jewelles and bellis remanyng within the parysshe churche of Tytsey made the xxi day of Marche in the 3d yere of King Edward VIth by Sir William Wylson parson ther, William Lye and Philip Reynoldes Churchwardens, William Smyth Henry Valenten and John Reynoldes inhabitants."

Item ii belles in the stepyll and a sacryng bell, and other plate jewelles ornamentes or belles they have none. Memorandum that ther hathe ben nothing stolen nor sold out of this churche sith the first year of the Kinges Majesties reigne that now is."

In May and June, 1652, appear three consecutive entries of deaths from small-pox.

On 25th May, 1551, the shock of an earthquake was felt at Titsey, Godstone, Reigate, and other places in the neighbourhood.

PAROCHIAL CHARITIES.

Henry Smith, Esq., who left benefactions to almost every parish in his native county of Surrey, by will, dated 1633, vested in the hands of trustees £2 annually, for the benefit of the poor of Titsey. The sum now amounts to £3 11s., and is distributed in calico, the requirements being that the persons claiming should have lived in the parish five years.

William Peters, of Oxted, by will proved 28 February, 1834, bequeathed the sum of £200 Three per Cent. Bank Annuities to the minister and churchwardens of the parish of Titsey, upon trust to apply the interest thereof every Christmas towards finding bread, fuel, clothing or other necessaries of life as might by them be thought most beneficial for the comfort of the poor.

About the year 1775 the parishioners purchased a few acres of land at Warlingham, as a provision for the poor and to go in relief of the poor's rate, to which purpose the rents are still applied.

Antiquities.

THE PILGRIM'S WAY.

This road used formerly to traverse the whole of the parish, entering it at the foot of the Chalk Hill, and leaving it where it enters the parish of Tatsfield, about a mile beyond the church. That part of it which ran through the Park, the line of which can still be distinctly traced, was stopped up after the widening and improving of the main turnpike road from Limpsfield to Croydon, in 1768. It is the road which runs now through the village under the churchyard wall, and the farm which lies beyond still bears the name of "Pilgrim's Lodge." There can be no doubt that this is a very ancient track, made before the coming of the Romans, but used by them, as would appear from the numerous traces of villas and other Roman remains found near its course. It is supposed to have led from Winchester to Canterbury, and can be traced from Farnham to Guildford, thence by or near St. Martha's chapel, through the parish of Albury, under Box Hill to Reigate. After leaving Reigate it ran by Gatton and through Merstham parish, then under the chalk hill, through Godstone Corner Wood and behind Rook's Nest, into Oxted parish, where it passed through Barrow Green Wood, and thence by Titsey and Tatsfield to Chevening. Here its course has been interrupted, but it can be seen again above Otford, Kemsing, and Wrotham; whence it ran to Halling and Charing, and above the Ashford and Canterbury turnpike road to Canterbury. It acquired the name of Pilgrim's Way from the pilgrimages that were made to the shrine of St. Thomas à Becket at Canterbury, and it has been supposed, with much probability, that Henry II., when he landed at Southampton, July 8th, 1174, to do penance at Becket's tomb, may have passed along this road. This much we know, that he rode to Canterbury with speed, avoiding towns as much as possible, which this road would have enabled him to do; and that on Friday, the 12th July, he reached the cathedral of Canterbury.

THE ROMAN VILLA.

This is situated in the Park, close to the stream and about 300 yards south of the Pilgrim's Way. It was first discovered in draining in 1847, and was thoroughly excavated in 1864. It consists of a court with north and south corridors, a few chambers, and a bath. Its extreme length from east to west is 125 feet, and extreme width 60 feet. The walls are built principally of flints, and vary in thickness from 2 feet 6 inches to 15 inches. There remain in the outer court some portions of rude tesselated pavement. The coins that have been found there consist of a small brass of Julius Cæsar; three small brasses of Constantine the Great, emperor A.D. 323; one small brass of Constans his son, emperor A.D. 337; a first brass of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, born A.D. 121. A fine coin in good preservation was found in 1850 in a hedgerow of the Pilgrim's Way, just beyond the village of Titsey. In addition to these coins a considerable number of iron things have been found there, consisting principally of nails and staples, as also two knives and a horse or mule bit, and very large quantities of pottery, principally of native manufacture, with some fragments of Samian ware, all unfortunately broken. Among the less common things are some specimens of glass, a portion of an armilla or bracelet of green colour, made of bronze wire twisted and hammered flat; a bone or ivory pin about $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length; and a bronze mask $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in height, made of thin metal beaten up in relief, having a bearded face with a moustache, in all probability a representation of Neptune.

Among other antiquities the two following are worthy of notice, and were both found in grubbing a wood in the lower part of the Park. The first is a flint implement of the chisel type, polished and sharp at the broad end. It measures rather more than 6 inches in length, is nearly $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick, and $2\frac{3}{4}$ in breadth, and weighs 16 ounces.

The second is a hammer of greenstone, with a hole drilled through it, into which probably a wooden handle was fastened. It measures $5\frac{1}{8}$ inches in length, is $1\frac{3}{4}$ inch thick, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches in breadth.

THE OLD YEW TREE.

This fine old tree, which stands close to the house, marks the site of the ancient churchyard. From its size and appearance it may well be considered to be from six to eight hundred years old. It girths 19 feet 6 inches at a distance of five feet from the ground. Under it lie several stone coffin-lids with crosses incised* on them: they are probably Saxon or early Norman; and one of them, which has a more ornamental cross, is of the twelfth century. It is from this cross that the one on the altar-tomb in the chapel has been copied.

Miscellanea.

COLD HARBOUR.

The clump of beech-trees at the top of the hill lying off the road which leads from Botley Hill to Westerham is so called. It is a name of constant occurrence in this neighbourhood and throughout England, and is commonly found near lines of ancient road. The derivation of it is uncertain: it generally, though not universally, occurs in places in a high and exposed situation, and to this fact the origin of it may probably be referred. This is the highest point of the parish of Titsey, the altitude being 881 feet above the sea-level, that of the church being 473 feet, that of the house 459.

The plantations on the hill are 210 acres in extent. The planting of them was commenced in 1807, and continued at intervals until 1840, when they were completed. Assuming that the trees were planted at a distance of 4 feet apart, which was as nearly as possible the distance, the number of trees required was 571,620.

In the garden is a fine specimen of the Cryptomeria japonica. It measures 38 ft. in height, and the circumference of the stem at the base is 3 ft. 10 in. The Taxodium sempervirens measures 40 ft. 6. in. in height, and the circumference of the stem at the base is 7 ft. 6. in.

* "Incised" is evidently an inexact description; the crosses were no doubt left in relief.—Ed.
